

The Role of Citizens in the Election in Nepal Key Notes:

The Role of Citizens in the Election in Nepal:

Before Election:

- Citizens have a role to register themselves to vote and ensure their information is updated.
- They can also participate in voter education programs to learn about the candidates and the issues.
- Citizens can also encourage others to vote and educate them on the importance of participating in the election.

During Election:

- Citizens have a duty to cast their vote and help maintain a peaceful and orderly voting process.
- They can also report any irregularities or problems they encounter during the voting process to the proper authorities.

After Election:

- Citizens can monitor the election results and make sure they are accurate.
- They can also participate in post-election activities, such as protests or celebrations, depending on the outcome of the election.

Role of Students in the Election in Nepal:

- Students can play an important role in encouraging their peers to vote and educating them about the candidates and issues.
- They can also volunteer as poll workers or observers to help ensure a fair and orderly election process.
- Students can also participate in post-election activities, such as protests or celebrations, depending on the outcome of the election.
